

Out and About.

Next time you have a walk take look closely at the flowers, leaves and trees you see around. If you have a camera on you take a few snaps of interesting things you see, or even collect a few leaves if its safe to.

If you have a bit of paper and a pencil maybe try to draw what you see, or you could sketch some things you captured in your photos if you took any.

Here are some photos of some things I saw on my walk at Beverley Westwood... your walk might be around where you live, or could even be the things you spot at home – its up to you.

If you cant get out at the moment, don't worry.. Maybe you can use these photos as your inspiration... did anyone spot the bull hiding in the bushes! Gave me quite a surprise!

Have fun, stay safe – looking forward to seeing what you might come up with!

Illustration Project

We all probably have a favorite book.. I bet you can think of what the front cover looks like.

Sometimes books are re-released with a new cover.. maybe to bring it up to date, or to engage a new audience.

Your task is to think of your favourite book and redesign the cover and the title. Sketch it out a few times and choose the one you think is your best and colour it if you can. The next pics are some book covers my daughter loves...if you cant think of any maybe you could redesign these.

What will your look like?

Black Lives Matter

- Some of you might have seen the Black Lives Matter marches on the news, a time when people are standing up for what they believe and that every single human being matters, no matter what.
- I've noticed posters in windows and people more openly discussing how they feel about the changes that still need to be made.
- Your task is to make a poster about Black Lives Matter, or something you are equally passionate about. On the next slide are some examples of posters I've seen during lockdown and also some images of the marches.

Look at these poster designs, some are as simple as just words, some have painted images and words combined. Which ones do you like and why.

The hands in these posters are simple and powerful... which poster do you prefer?

Here are two photographs of protests in different parts of the world. If you look closely you can see people have made their own signs and some are wearing face masks.

Think about what you are passionate about... saving the planet, equality, children's rights...the list is endless.. make your poster to reflect the things you are passionate about or use these photos as a start point.
